THEME

Living in the 'age of anger', suffering an increasing 'environmental crisis' and overcoming 'hyper consumption' of the capitalistic world, our narrative is complex and global.

It speaks through various textures, cultures and materials. It provokes the future while enhancing the present, thus taking us further in search for our 'progress'.

Participants will engage in physical, (e)motional and verbal discourse - drawing from their personal narrative within group configurations of international protagonists, abstracting the themes into performative art making...

The framework of a unique site (rural & urban) fosters various stimuli for living and working together: creating, contemplating, discussing, writing, gardening...
